uttle goes home some rest, repair

CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) Five flights and 10 million dollar shuttle Columbia is going up for an overhauled — giving temporarily, to the second ship's fleet.

With Columbia out of action, the space agency's budget is to increase to five, next year. Challenger will be one of the 1983 missions.

Flight will return this week to the Space Center here where it must modify the ship to cabin habitable for carrying on Spacelab crew. Workers are the bulky equipment and equipment used during the development flights.

out the time Columbia is its overhang, Challenger will move next door into the giant Vehicle Assembly Building to be mated with twin booster rockets that will prop it into space in late 1983.

The next three flights are Challenger's — and the ship, like Columbia, is scheduled to log a number of firsts for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration:

First spaceship fleet: Challenger's debut in flight 6.

First American woman in space: Flight 7 in April.

First genuine roundtrip: Landing on the shuttle runway at the Kennedy Space Center here, scheduled for the same flight.

First nighttime landing: Flight 8 in July.

First black astronaut: Sam, flight.

A top NASA official said Tuesday that a spacewalk might be rescheduled as early as Challenger's maiden flight in January.

Reagan tells Congress to leave budget alone

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — President Reagan demands that the House and Senate go along with his income-tax cuts, the big buildup in defense spending, and try to enact a big public-works program to create jobs, declaring, "We will not negate all the good we accomplished in these first 22 months."

Despite growing pressure to change the course he has vowed to stay, Reagan served notice on the coming lame-duck session of Congress that he is in little mood to compromise on his basic economic program. Those who claim it isn't working, he said, are merely waging a "propaganda campaign."

Public works

As for calls by Democrats and some Republicans for a dramatic cut to 10.4 percent joblessness, Reagan said: "Let's quit kidding ourselves. We will not solve the problems of unemployed auto workers and steel workers with another giant, temporary, public-works program, financed by depleting still more of the nation's precious seed-corn."

The president spoke before the U.S. League of Savings Associations, whose industry is suffering its worst financial battering since the Depression. Savings and loans losses are expected to run upwards of $5.1 billion this year.

$200 billion

Despite projections both within and outside the administration that future budgets could run deficits hitting $200 billion per year, Reagan declared off to cancel or revise the tax cut in store next year.

"We cannot permit the Congress to take away the third year of the people's tax cut or the indexing provision (which prevents workers from being put into higher tax brackets because of inflation) and we're not going to allow it to do that," said Reagan.

Warm reception

Reagan got a warm reception from an audience happy about a new deregulation bill giving savings and loans power to operate more like commercial banks and to compete with money market funds for deposits.

He said the government spent $66 billion on jobs programs in the seven years ending in 1981 but that unemployment increased during the period and the economy deteriorated.

"What the unemployed need most is a broad-based economic recovery," Reagan said, adding that his own policies are beginning to have an impact.

He said the nation's top priority "is to restore America's industrial power."

"A propaganda campaign would have you believe these deficits are caused by our so-called massive tax cut and defense buildup," said Reagan. "Well, that's a real dirty doghouse because, even after our tax deductions are fully in place, they will barely neutralize the enormous payroll tax increases approved in 1977" to bail out the Social Security system.

Defense spending

He said his planned increase in defense spending — 7 percent after inflation — will leave the Pentagon with about half of the nation's federal budget. "I need to run around half," he said.

He added, "There is simply no escaping the truth: current and projected deficits result from sharp increases in non-defense spending. If the United States is to meet its investment challenge we must get growth of non-defense spending under control once and for all."

Balanced program

Reagan said he will work with Congress to develop a program to reduce the huge deficits, but added, "It must be a balanced program that brings deficits down without violating our goals of reducing the burden of taxation, protecting the needy and moving forward with our program to rebuild America's badly neglected defenses."

'Death knell' sounded?

Draft registration may die

"The Department of Justice believes the opinion is wrong and will proceed with investigations and prosecutions of non-registrants in a routine manner," said Arthur Brill, deputy director of public affairs.

Lyng said he believes the legal problems with registration cannot be cured retroactively and that it should be abandoned.

Others in the government would have to start all over again with new regulations, and reregister men, he said. He questioned whether Congress would be willing to appropriate funds to start over.

"The government has a serious law enforcement problem on its hands," added David Landau of the American Civil Liberties Union, saying he too sees no solution other than ending the system.

Former President Carter, who reinstated draft registration, said Tuesday the courts' ultimate decision would have a "profound impact" on future efforts to mobilize in defense of emergencies.

But Carter defended the registration order, saying it had been instituted legally and was vital to the national defense.

"In my opinion, as a former president, it was done properly," Carter said.

On Monday night, San Diego will visit the Los Angeles Raiders.

The contract between the players' association and the government will be thrown out because the players' association set a strike deadline of Tuesday, Sept. 21, the day after a second regular-season weekend, barring a breakthrough in negotiations that had begun seven months earlier.

In what it called one last attempt to avert a strike, the union abandoned its demand for 55 percent of the team's gross revenue.

The season opened Sept. 12 with all the games being played.

The only potential trouble was in Seattle, where the Seahawks threatened to strike their game with Cleveland because Sam McCullum, their player representative, had been cut. McCullum subsequently signed with Minnesota.

In the meantime, it will be business as usual and young men will be expected to register, she said.

Overturned ruling may work against draft resisters

By TODD F. MAYNES
Staff Writer

Although draft opponents say a Los Angeles court's decision Monday may force the government to abandon its draft registration plan, a BYU law professor said students who need to register for the draft should do so because the ruling will likely be overturned.

U.S. District Judge Terry Hatter dismissed charges against a 21-year-old draft resister Monday because the government had failed to implement the plan before announcing the plan before implementing it. The judge also ruled the man's first amendment rights of free speech were violated because the government chose to prosecute him.

"It is very possible that by only prosecuting the vocal ones, that they are indeed violating the right of free speech," Riggs said. "That is a significant and delicate question that could have great implications."

"If a higher court rules that free speech was violated in this instance, it's possible the government will then have a monkey on its back compelling it to prosecute all the draft resisters. If they can't prosecute the vocal ones, they will need to prosecute everyone. In that sense, this ruling could be a negative one for draft resisters."

Liable for prosecution

He said because of this, men who fail to register for the draft because they think the ruling eliminates the registration system could be especially liable for prosecution.

Riggs added that the Justice Department has up to one month before filing an appeal, and that although it has not filed yet, it will likely do so once it has examined the ruling.

Students were given the theme "What's right with your school?" he said. Teachers selected winners from each class. From those essays, a winner was selected for the entire school. That student won a $5 prize and the essay will be forwarded to the education association, explained Glazier.

Students at Westmore Elementary School also participated in an essay contest. The winning students have been reading their essays over the intercom each morning, said Susan Farnsworth, library representative to the Alpine School District Association.

Westmore students took part in a poster contest as well. The posters will be on display this week at Carlisle Square supermarket in Orem, Poco said.

$5,000 per year not enough

TAMPA, Fla. — The musicians of the Florida Gulf Coast Symphony have gone on strike, with many of them saying that $5,000 is not enough and that it's the main source of income.

The players voted 72-7 to strike Monday, with six abstaining. Symphony management and Local 721 of the Musicians Union have been negotiating a new contract to replace one that expired in April.

The players' average salaries range from $4,700 to $5,100. The union is seeking an increase to $6,000 the first year, $7,500 the second and $9,500 the third. Carolyn Wahl, orchestra committee chairwoman, said 85 percent of the musicians depend on orchestras as their main source of income. Peter Zindler, chairman of the symphony's board of governors, called the strike "misguided."

Smokers not welcome

SAN DIEGO — Retail stores and certain sections of restaurants will be off-limits to smokers as of January under a measure passed unanimously by the San Diego City Council.

The measure passed Monday also says employers will be required to try to establish smoke-free areas for their non-smoking employees. That part of the ordinance goes into effect July 1, 1984. Employers won't be required to spend money on making changes in work places.

"There is enough evidence that secondary smoke is harmful to people near it that I feel it's right that we step in to protect the health of our citizens," said Councilwoman Susan Golding.

Satellite links Pacific Islands

HONOLULU — The president of the Republic of Palau brought his tiny nation into the space age when he picked up his telephone and called to exchange greetings with a development official in Honolulu.

The chat Monday inaugurated the first of seven satellite Earth stations to be established in the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. The station, installed on the island of Koror by COMSAT, links Palau with Honolulu, through which all international calls will be routed. Palau had relied on radio for phone and telegraph service.

Hawaii Planning and Economic Development Director Hoku Kono, who spoke with President Haruo Remelik, called the connection excellent.

Fallout trial testimony ends, decision may take months

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Nine weeks to the day after the opening gavel, testimony ended Tuesday in the massive federal lawsuit over whether this country's atomic testing program caused its citizens to sicken and die of cancer.

"I think we all have a very extensive record. I think it's a good record," U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins said as he recessed the trial. He scheduled final arguments Dec. 17.

Jenkins, who is hearing a number of other cases, is expected to take several weeks or months after final arguments to review about 6,600 pages of testimony and nearly 20 orange crate-size boxes of evidence before rendering a verdict.

Defense attorney Henry Gill of the U.S. Justice Department, denying his motion — rejected twice previously by the judge — that the suit be dismissed, Jenkins said he would also hear arguments on that motion Dec. 17.

Plaintiffs' attorney Ralph Hunsaker said he was "extremely glad it's over."

"As to how things have gone, that depends on the judge," he said.

However, Hunsaker said the plaintiffs were encouraged that Jenkins has rejected past attempts by the government to have the case dismissed.

After calling a final witness Tuesday morning, Gill reviewed a list of about 1,250 items offered as evidence in the case, and Bruce Jenkins he had concluded his case, began nearly four weeks ago in the trial that opened Sept. 14.

Hunsaker called a single rebuttal witness, Dr. Joseph Lyon of the University of Utah.

Lyon, one of the plaintiffs' key witnesses, testified early in the trial about a 1979 study he authored that linked high childhood leukemia rates in southern Utah to fallout from atomic testing at the nearby Nevada Test Site.

Space shuttle 'delivered' after walkless 5-day orbit

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle returned to Earth Tuesday as a tried-and-true carrier of space cargo, its commander exulting, "Yes sir, we delivered." With dawn's early light shining off the American flag on its side, the shuttle cut through desert clouds to a landing.

"We've been on a fantastic voyage," Vance Brand said.

Making it look easy, the spacecraft commander steered Columbia over California's Mojave Desert and glided to a smooth stop with more than 5,000 feet of concrete left.

"You certainly lived up to the motto on this flight," Roy Bridges, at the console in Mission Control, told the astronauts.

The motto, repeated often during the flight, was "We Deliver."

Columbia's flight five was the first operational mission of the world's first reusable spacecraft. With more than 10 million miles on its flight log, the ship will undergo a 10-month overhaul.

Challenger, the next ship in the fleet, is being readied at Cape Canaveral to take the next three flights, beginning with flight six on Jan. 24. James A. Abramson, NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said the space walk scrubbed on Monday because of malfunctioning space suits may be taken then if we are certain we understand exactly what went wrong.

Mission specialist Joseph Allen recalled that after he and William Lenoir deployed two communications satellites last week, Brand commented that the only flight objectives left were an EVA (extravehicular activity) and a landing. Allen said he responded:

"If we have to make a choice, we want a safe landing. It turned out we made that choice."

"The commission noted public anxiety that might be expected. Columbia no longer looks as if it just came out of the box. Its white surfaces were streaked with smudges. Its dark surfaces were more gray than black.

Thirty minutes after touchdown, the astronauts — Brand, pilot Robert Overmyer, Allen and Lenoir — stepped from the ship that had been their home for five days. Waving and smiling, they bounded jauntily, one after the other, down a stair ramp, walked around Columbia and appeared pleased with what they saw.

Although the space walk was scrubbed, Columbia accomplished its primary goals: acting as a carrier, then a launch platform for two communications satellites. The satellites were deployed on flight days one and two. Their own rockets then sent them to their "stationary" orbit 22,300 miles above the equator.

The commission said it found concerns about creating a monster exaggerated. But Capron said a prohibition may be necessary in the area of the hybridization of human beings with other living things.

The panel said scrutiny should be undertaken by a broad range of participants — not only from Congress and the Executive Branch but also from scientific and academic sources, industrial and commercial groups, lawyers, religious leaders and members of the general public.

In connection with work currently underway, some guidelines have been worked out.

'Monster' claims overstated

Genetic engineering studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission, citing the danger of "attempting to perfect human beings," called Tuesday for a new body to scrutinize genetic engineering.

Albert M. Capron, executive director of the commission, told a House science and technology subcommittee that his panel discovered "well-founded" concern that no government body was exercising adequate oversight or addressing the ethical questions surrounding genetic engineering.

Capron said, however, that his panel had not found "in the gene-splicing now being planned or undertaken, the 'fundamental danger' to human values, social norms or ethical principles" that alarmed religious groups that called for the commission's study in 1980.

The commission noted public anxiety that work in the field might remake human beings, like the monster in the novel "Frankenstein," and that the use of these new powers might be considered "playing God."

The commission said it found concerns about creating a monster exaggerated. But Capron said a prohibition may be necessary in the area of the hybridization of human beings with other living things.

Higher car costs cause increased wholesale prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by higher costs for new cars, wholesale prices rose 0.5 percent in October, the government said Tuesday. The modest increase, while reversing an actual drop the previous month, was seen as "good news" at the White House, but a related report showed another slip in factory output and portended more layoffs and a lingering recession.

Despite last month's comparative surge, wholesale prices at the factory level rose 0.3 percent for the first 11 months. October's rate would translate to 5.7 percent if it held for a year.

Continually moderating food and fuel prices were more than offset by the spur in prices for new cars and trucks as manufacturers terminated discounts given to dealers in September to clear away inventories of 1982 models.

The boost in October followed a 0.1 percent decline in wholesale prices the month before. But deputy White House press secretary Peter Roussel said the Labor Department's report was "good news," and "indicates we're winning the battle against inflation."

In another report, however, the Federal Reserve Board said production in the nation's factories and mines fell 0.8 percent in October, the 13th such decline in the last 15 months.

were made Monday night to procedures that would dissolve the Waste Special Services District. Beck, district chairman of the American Fork, said the was established in 1975, and began functioning on a "north-south basis in 1978, with Spanish operating a landfill for the end of the county and Orem operating a landfill for the northern summers, we started looking for a solution to the district," he said. "At that time, Beck said, the district had been audited to determine if it had any debts that would be with the proposed dissolution of the district.

Beck said the audit found a debt of a million dollars and a debt of $10,560 to the IFG company. "The commissioners recommended that the district half of the $10,560 and the pick up the other half," Beck at midnight, he took some paper and wrote single-spaced what had happened that day. "For an uneventful day, so much had happened," he said.

"When we stop to reflect on each day's happenings, a fuller understanding will come," said Elder Hanks. "This may amount to what heaven is."

Elder Hanks quoted author David Grayson: "It may be the future life is only a reliving of the life we already know."

There are three fundamental elements a person needs to know in this life, said Elder Hanks. "We need to know the foundational principles in that body which constitutes truth."

This means knowing God, Christ, God's plan and the eternities, said Elder Hanks. "As the scriptures tell us, life eternal is to know God and his eternal son."

Elder Hanks spoke of a man whose wife had just passed away after a long illness. One night the man's son asked if he might sleep with him. After the two were settled in bed and the lights turned out, the son asked, "Daddy, are you looking at me?"

The father assumed his son was that he was and the son fell asleep. The man said as he lay awake in the darkness he had never felt such loneliness. He cried aloud to the Lord, "God, oh God, if you're looking at me and I feel my need, I can make it."

It is also important for students to remember they are children of God, said Elder Hanks. "We are unique individuals with talents to cultivate," he said. "Life is purposeful — it is a school ground, not a playground."

"We are God's children," he said, "but we are also brothers, sisters and neighbors."

Elder Hanks said there are two groups of people who cannot and will never be happy. "The first are such as have but do not spend," he said. "The second group are such as know and do not act."

All persons have been given a chance in this life to choose the way they will live, said Elder Hanks. When they know things, they should be motivated to action, he said.

Former Y student dies in Maryland

Colleen Lawrence, a former BYU student, died Nov. 10 at her home in Rockville, Md., of natural causes.

Lawrence, who had been at BYU this semester, returned home a month ago because of failing health.

She was born on Jan. 14, 1961, in Ogden, Utah, and attended Richard M. Smith High School in Maryland. She attended BYU after graduating from high school.

About three and a half years ago, Lawrence lost her sight as a result of sugar diabetes. Lawrence is survived by her parents, Joe and Dorothy Lawrence, Rockville, Md.; her grandmother, Reva Skidmore, Salt Lake City; three brothers, Keith, Provo; and Glenn, Ogden; and Kevin, Rockville, Md.; and three sisters, Janine, Provo; Valerie and Melanie, Rockville, Md.

A memorial service will be Thursday at 2 p.m. at the Deseret Mortuary, 36 E. 700 South in Salt Lake City.

A viewing will precede the service from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Burial will follow the service in Ogden.

Social VP choice to be ratified

The ratification of the new ASBYU Social Office Vice President and a possible bylaw revision involving entrance qualifications for ASBYU Supreme Court justices and student defenders will be the major items of discussion at tonight's executive council meeting, said Staciee Hosford, ASBYU Public Relations Director.

New vice president

After two weeks of taking applications and conducting interviews, ASBYU President Schipper Clawson will bring his choice for the new social office vice president before the executive council for ratification.

The appointee must then receive a two-thirds majority vote to become an official member of the executive council, explained Hosford.

The by-law proposal, made by ASBYU Ombudsman Teri Bond, concerns entrance qualifications for supreme court justices and student defenders. It is subject to Hosford said.

The council will meet today at 7 p.m. in 258 ELWC.

BYU receiver Mike Eddo dives across the goal line to culminate a 35-yard touchdown hook up from quarterback Steve Young during the Cougars' loss to Utah State.

From boxing glove to BYU, Eddo has come a long way

By BELINDA FIKE
Staff Writer

Cougar wide receiver Mike Eddo has come a long way from his days of playing football with a boxing glove and dreaming of becoming a wide receiver.

Eddo, a transfer student from Saddleback Junior College in Mission Viejo, Calif., said he had wanted to be a wide receiver since he was a kid.

"I played with a kid down the street all the time. We didn't have a football, so we played with a boxing glove."

Eddo added that as a kid, wide receivers Fred Biletnikoff and Ots Taylor were his idols.

"I'm happy with what I've done so far, but I can do a lot more," said Eddo of his performance at BYU. "I've been getting a lot of attention recently, but I've been able to play like this all along."

Eddo cited his ability to make the big play as the greatest asset he offers the Cougar team. He said he has confidence in his speed, but it is strategy more than quickness that counts in the run for the long bomb.

"I've been getting a lot of attention recently, but I've been able to play like this all along."

—Mike Eddo

Eddo said Neil Balholm, Dan Plater and Scott Collie have helped him to understand BYU's style of football.

"I didn't see as many different defenses at the junior college I played at as I do here. I was used to playing the wishbone, but now I understand the defensive plays better."

Eddo said BYU's wide receiver coach Norman Chow has also been a help to his football career.

"Coach Chow had a lot of patience with me. I started out slow because I hadn't played for a year, but I feel like I'm improving with each game."

Eddo has caught passes for 205 yards and scored three touchdowns this season, including a 56-yard bomb during last week's match with San Diego. He was redshirted during the 1981 season after transferring to BYU.

During 1980 at Saddleback Junior College Eddo was named South Mission Conference player of the year. He was also named all-state, All-American and first team all-conference twice.

One of the main reasons Eddo chose to transfer to BYU in 1981 after playing spring football at Illinois was because of BYU's reputation for quality coaches.

"Quite a few of the schools recruiting me turned out to be disappointing because I felt I couldn't trust the coaches," Eddo said. "They would make promises and not follow up on them."

He also felt a lack of concern from the coaches at other schools toward him.

"They said I could receive an education too, but when it came down to it they didn't really care. Here the coaches ask how you're doing in your classes," Eddo said. The BYU coaches are interested in their players. "They're the kind of guys you could go to with your problems."

Another aspect of the Cougar team that attracted Eddo was the passing game. "I knew I would get to show off my talents as a wide receiver," said Eddo.

His three TD catches place Eddo second behind Gordon Hudson's six TD grabs among the BYU receiving corps.

One of Eddo's touchdowns came in the Cougars' loss before the rowdy Aggys in Utah State's upset win over the Cougars. On that play, Eddo grabbed the ball on the 20 and eluded several Aggie defenders before diving into the end zone for the score.

"BYU fans are trying hard," said Eddo. "People compare them to other schools, but the students here don't get as rowdy because it's a church school. There's a reason for the difference. The fans would do better if they could use horns, but that's not allowed here."

Eddo hopes to continue his football career professionally after college and eventually coach football for a junior college in California.

Holland to start annual run

BYU's annual Turkey Trot will be Thursday at 4 p.m., and BYU President Jeffrey R. Holland will fire the gun to begin the race.

The race will begin in front of the Richards Building and follow an on-campus course of three to four miles.

The drawing card for the race is turkeys. Each first place winner in BYU staff, student, and track divisions for men and women will be awarded a turkey.

Other prizes will be given to other top finishers.

Administrators Office staff member Mark Peterson said watches will not be allowed, because there will also be a category for estimated finish times.

Peterson said competitors are encouraged to come early enough to register with their BYU activity cards, so they can be ready to go.

Dantley recovers, may play today

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Jazz forward Adrian Dantley, the NBA club's leading scorer, has been released from the hospital and has returned to practice.

Jazz trainer Don Sparks said a decision will be made today whether Dantley will be able to play tonight against the New Jersey Nets at the Salt Palace.

Dantley suffered a fractured sinus bone when he was poked in the right eye during last Wednesday's victory against Denver, and was admitted to Lakeview Hospital on Friday.

He was released Monday and showed up for practice.

He wore goggles at the practice, but was not allowed to play in drills involving contact, and would not be allowed to do so today either, Sparks said.

Fowler shines in debut

Second team Cougar quarterback Blaine Fowler made his collegiate debut taking over for Steve Young during the fourth quarter of the San Diego game this weekend.

"I was shaky at first, but after the first two plays, I started having fun," said Fowler.

"Blaine is a fine quarterback and he did a great job during the game Saturday," said BYU quarterback coach Mike Krzmarick. "Blaine hasn't had much experience, but he does have a lot of confidence and it's paying off for him now."

Fowler moved from the third team to the second team quarterback position last week when Eric Krzmarick quit the team. Fowler said Krzmarick's decision was a surprise to everyone. "All the quarterbacks are really close, but Eric didn't say anything about quitting until the day he left."

Fowler said he has moved up the ladder has given him more time in practice and a better chance to play in the games. "Before this week, there wasn't much chance that I would get to play, but now I need to be more mentally prepared for each game because I could be called in at any time."

Fowler said he has been playing as quarterback since he was nine years old. "I played on a small-fry team my dad coached back in New York."

"When I started going on recruiting trips after high school, I decided to choose a college I would be happy with even if I weren't playing football," said Fowler. "BYU has worked out well. I've been very happy here."

Fowler, a sophomore pre-med major, says people aren't surprised anymore to hear athlete is majoring in medicine. "People are past the dumb-jock image. They're beginning to realize that you need some intelligence to understand the different football plays."

Fowler said he hopes to make a valuable contribution to the Cougar team by his ability to lead the team effectively down the field.

Artist Grant Lund, a former BYU student, creates one of his woodcut prints. The artist's prints and pen and ink drawing are currently on display in the B.F. Larson Gallery HFAC.

Artist's woodcut prints on display in Y gallery

By LONI MANNING
Staff Writer

Artists often seek and represent themselves in their works; former BYU student and artist Grant Lund is no exception.

An exhibit of Lund's woodcut prints and pen and ink drawings is now on display in the B.F. Larson Gallery HFAC. The exhibit will continue until Nov. 25.

While this exhibit is similar in many respects to other figurative print and drawing exhibits, there are several things that make this show different. Many of Lund's symbolic works include images of the artist's own face integrated with other objects or scenes. A major piece in the exhibit is called "The Modern Jonah: The Confinements of our Freedom."

Deseret Quartet to present Thursday recital

BYU's string ensemble, the Deseret Quartet, will present a recital Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Madsen Recital Hall HFAC.

The program will include Mozart's Quartet in D Major, k.575, and the Quartet No. 2 in D-flat Major, Op. 15, by Erno Dohnanyi, a contemporary Hungarian composer and conductor.

Beethoven's Quartet in E-flat Major, Op. 74 will conclude the program.

All four members of the quartet are BYU Music Department faculty members.

Violinist Christopher Kimber and cellist Julie Bevan Zumsteg will perform for the first time with the quartet.

Kimber is temporarily replacing first violinist Percy Kalt, who is in Europe on leave from the university.

Kimber has studied in the United States and England and has appeared with several orchestras, including the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Zumsteg replaces former cellist Suzanne McIntosh.

A former graduate of BYU, Zumsteg received her master's degree from the University of Southern California.

She has been a member of the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra and the Omaha Symphony.

Other members of the quartet are violinist Barbara Williams and violist David Dalton.

Admission to the recital is free.

One of the large woodcut prints is entitled "Sins: The Concept of Mercy and Justice." Although the Christ figure and the birds are easily recognizable, the conceptual symbols are challenging.

Woodcut is the predominant medium used in the exhibit. These works range in subject from the studies of a flute player to the winter woods in Missoula.

Many of the prints as well as the drawings in the show are visual explorations of personality through portraits.

Also included in the exhibit is "The Disciples," which consists of nine individual portraits including LDS Church leaders, children and other individuals. Through color, design and proximity, these portraits function as one painting, and yet each painting can stand alone.

Much of Lund's work depicts his feelings related to the LDS Church and his involvement in it. Included in the show are prints of LDS temples, stories and personalities.

According to Lund, art grows out of the artist's experience, and he feels his varied work experience has been a major contributing factor to his style. Lund's experience includes work as a theater bouncer and manager, sign painter, crew member for the filming of a Walt Disney animal adventure story, fire fighter, garbage collector and forest service trail maker.

Zumsteg replaces former cellist Suzanne McIntosh.

A former graduate of BYU, Zumsteg received her master's degree from the University of Southern California.

She has been a member of the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra and the Omaha Symphony.

Other members of the quartet are violinist Barbara Williams and violist David Dalton.

Admission to the recital is free.

Festival features classes led by leading musicians

More than 600 young vocalists from 12 Utah high schools are expected to attend the all-day High School Festival Saturday in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

The festival, sponsored by the Department of Music, will feature choirs from Orem, Hillcrest, South, Davis, Spanish Fork, Woods Cross, Timpanogos, Bingham, Viewmont, Bonneville, Jordan and Emery high schools, according to festival director and music faculty member Dr. Ronald Staheli.

Beginning at 8 a.m., the students will participate in a variety of workshop and performance activities, including 15-minute adjudicated contests by each choir.

Guest clinicians and adjudicators for the festival include Dr. Newell Weight, professor of music and choral director at the University of Utah, and Dr. Charlene Archibeque of San Jose State University.

Dr. Archibeque is nationally recognized for her work with the development of choral tone in high school and university choirs, Staheli said.

Dr. Jerold Ottley, director of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, will also conduct workshops, along with Craig Jessop of the Air Force Singing Sergeants in Washington, D.C., and several members of BYU's choral music faculty, including Dr. Staheli, Dr. Ralph Woodward and Dr. Donald Riplinger.

The workshop will feature several mini-concerts by the BYU Oratorio Choir in the de Jong Concert Hall at 8 p.m. During the concert, the choir will present a 15-minute program and the festival's vocalists perform in two numbers under the direction of Weight and Archibeque, Staheli said.

Area musicians and music educators are invited to attend any of the daytime workshop activities or performances free of charge.

Tickets for the Oratorio Choir concert are available at the music ticket office HFAC.

TV talent search promotes variety

NEW YORK (AP) —

The job applicants were told to be themselves, so one guy tried the old charade of making a away just as the girl started to sit down. It was not your typical briefcase, button-down collar interview.

The eager actors and actresses who responded to ABC-TV's annual talent search had four minutes on stage to do or say something so remarkable that they could impress a mind of directors who will be casting ABC's pilots and television movies for next season.

The auditions began Nov. 8 and end this Thursday. In all, ABC expects to see about 1,000 performers.

Inviting prospects to make auditions and seeking the New York theaters is a procedure born to help feed the great maw of modern

"With cable and more made-for-TV movies, we need actors," said Randall James, ABC's East Coast casting manager. "We must start cultivating ways for talent to come in."

He also noted: "It takes a lot of guts to come here. These people have to live with rejection day in and day out."

But for every 100 or so rejections, James expects one winner. That's why Kathleen Salamone, a of Schenectady, N.Y., took a pratfall when her audition partner gave her chair the old heave-ho. They were doing a scene from "Beyond Therapy," a recent play that was yanked from Broadway as quickly as the chair.

"We picked a crazy, slapstick piece to get noticed," said Salamone, whose last TV role was in the movie "For Lovers Only" in which she played a newswoman whose husband ignored her for Pamela.

"In the small amount of time we have, the best we can do is pick a light, quick piece and have fun."

James' advice to actors was to pick something that displayed their talents. "If they're great with physical comedy, they should show that off."

New Y faculty member fulfills teaching dream

By LORI DESPAIN
Staff Writer

Julie Zumsteg, new faculty cellist in the department, her dream of pursuing a music at BYU has been fulfilled.

"I was here as a student, I always felt I like to come back," she said of BYU. "This is want to be."

JULIE ZUMSTEG

Julie Zumsteg said she did not she would be able to come back. By keeping with BYU, Zumsteg said she heard the for a cello instructor was available, so she for the opening. "The things just happened from there," she said.

Fourth grade

Zumsteg began violin lessons when she was in grade. Her older brothers, who were also in music, were a big influence on her, she said. In fifth grade, Zumsteg started the cello.

"I saw a cello on TV once and I just decided I to play it," she said. Zumsteg said she remembers playing simple in the when she was a little girl. She enjoyed her piano lessons, but as she became more involved with the cello, the lessons took string lessons in the public schools. When her family moved to Salt Lake City from County, she began private lessons.

Documentaries on the topics of the effects of nuclear weapons and endangered species will be aired on BYU-TV tonight.

The first 30 minutes of "Nuclear War: A Guide To Armageddon" is devoted to a British documentary detailing the immediate and subsequent effects of such a bomb.

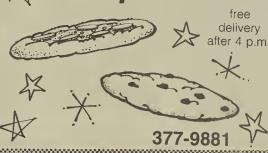

Is survival possible? That is the question posed in the second part of the program, which examines the civil defense debate in the United States. A panel of experts debate whether the massive evacuations planned by the Reagan administration could be executed in the event of an attack.

The second documentary, at 8 p.m., "Orangutans—Orphans of the Wild" takes a look at the shaggy, reddish-haired, human-sized anthropoid ape. Only an estimated 10,000 are left in their native Borneo and Sumatra, Indonesia.

This documentary, which begins at 7 p.m., examines work being done at an orangutan rehabilitation center in Sumatra.

Graduate into the fast lane.

We're looking for college students and graduates who want to fly, want to be leaders, want more responsibility at an early age than most men receive in a lifetime. The career you'd be applying for is a Marine Corps Officer. To qualify, you'll have to be in top physical condition—flying a rocket at supersonic speeds isn't a job for the faint at heart. You'll have to measure up to our demanding standards of academic achievement—there's no room for the slow of mind. And if you measure up, we'll offer you challenge, travel opportunity, good benefits and a salary commensurate with most corporate starting salaries. We can offer tuition assistance in the NROTC, Platoon Leaders Class (PLC), even a chance to join the Marine Reserve while you're still in college. Drop by your college placement center and set up an appointment with your Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer. Or call this number, 800-423-2600.

Utah enrollment up, tuition revenue down

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Enrollment at Utah's state colleges and universities was higher than anticipated, but tuition revenues were down at one school, the state Board of Regents heard Tuesday.

Van Alstyne, state commissioner of higher education, said statewide enrollment was expected to hit 65,000 in 1988, but students registered at Utah's colleges this year reached 65,016.

Six percent

Van Alstyne told the regents at their monthly meeting he expected enrollment of 62,200 this fall, up 6 percent or 3,664 students from last year.

"The enrollment increase was largely a product of the depressed economy," Van Alstyne said.

But he predicted enrollment would not increase next fall if the nation's economy improves.

He said Utah residents comprised the bulk of the increase as non-resident enrollment decreased — a shortage particularly felt at Utah State University.

USU collected $561,000 less than anticipated in fall tuition revenues, he said.

Van Alstyne said enrollment statewide was up 7.6 percent among residents and down 5.5 percent among non-residents.

Largest gains

Southern Utah State College and Utah's two technical colleges had the largest gains, with Utah Technical College at Provo showing a gain of 652 students, or 13.2 percent, from last fall.

The increase was the smallest at Weber State College, where 131 new students registered, Van Alstyne said.

Enrollment was down 0.1 percent at Snow College and 2.6 percent at College of Eastern Utah, he said.

Meanwhile, regents endorsed a proposal by a legislative subcommittee to revise the state constitution to mention the Board of Regents.
